DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

- (b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.
- 2. Claims 1-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Yurko, US 4,064,062.

Yurko teaches bleaching detergent compositions (see abstract). An example of such a composition is a powdered bleaching detergent comprising an anhydrous zeolite, ethanol, sodium silicate, and water (col. 14, example 1). As this reference meets all material limitations of the claims at hand, the reference is anticipatory. With respect to heat generation, as Yurko teaches the identical composition and process of the present claims, the examiner maintains the composition of Yurko will inherently meet this limitation. Regarding applicant's recitation of what is disclosed by the instructions, "Where sole distinction set out in claims over prior art is in printed matter, there being no new feature of physical structure and no new relation of printed matter to physical structure, such claims may not be allowed; it is only where claims define either new features of structure or new relations of printed matter to structure, or both, which new features or new relations give rise to some new and useful function, effect, or result, that claims may be allowed; particular branch of art considered does not change these principles." Ex parte Gwinn 112 USPQ 439. As the compositions are anticipated, and the instructions do not give rise to a new and useful function, effect or result, they do not contribute a patentable difference to applicant's invention.

3. Claims 1-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Pan et al, US 5,691,303.

Pan et al teach granular detergent compositions (see abstract). An example of such a composition is a granular detergent comprising an activated/dehydrated zeolite, sodium silicate, and water (col. 12, example II). As this reference meets all material limitations of the claims at hand, the reference is anticipatory.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

- 4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:
  - (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.
- 5. Claims 1-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Costa et al, US H1468.

Costa et al teach detergent compositions (see abstract). An example of such a composition is a granular detergent comprising an aluminosilicate, polyethylene glycol, and sodium silicate (col. 25, example II). Note that dehydrated zeolites are suitable for use in the invention (col. 7, lines 12-13). Costa et al do not specify the aluminosilicate used in example II as a dehydrated zeolite, however, as such zeolites are taught as suitable for use in their invention, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to use a dehydrated zeolite in example II and so meet the material limitations of the claims at hand.

6. Claims 1-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Calton et al, US 6,068,665.

Calton et al teach carpet cleaning compositions (see abstract). An example of such a composition is a dry powder comprising a zeolite where the composition is applied to a moistened, stained carpet, allowed to dry, and removed by vacuum (col. 4, examples 1-13). Note that calcined zeolites are suitable for use in the invention (col. 2, lines 61-62). Calton et al do not specify the zeolite used in their examples as a calcined zeolite, however, as such zeolites are taught as suitable for use in their invention, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to use a calcined zeolite in their examples and so meet the material limitations of the claims at hand.

7. Claims 1-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Gioffre et al, US 4,592,855.

Gioffre et al teach effervescent compositions having cleansing action (see abstract). The active ingredient in these effervescent compositions is a dehydrated zeolite (col. 7, example 1). The compositions are suitable for use in carpet cleaning compositions and stain removal compositions. Gioffre et al do not specifically teach a fabric cleaner containing a dehydrated zeolite, however as the compositions are clearly contemplated for this purpose, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to formulate a fabric cleaner with a dehydrated zeolite and so meet the material limitations of the claims at hand.
